I. REASON FOR THIS POLICY

University Distinguished Professorships are awarded on the basis of continued outstanding professional contributions and responsibilities at all levels of professional activity. This is one of the University's highest faculty honors.

II. STATEMENT OF POLICY

Teaching contributions include being an outstanding educator as demonstrated by breadth of knowledge and teaching responsibilities; by evidence of having had a strong constructive influence upon the careers of USD alumni; and by invitations to be a guest lecturer or Visiting Professor at other educational institutions and forums.

Scholarly contributions include continued distinguished original professional activity which is outstanding in quality and quantity as demonstrated; by publication of books, literature reviews, and original articles in refereed professional projects and programs which encompass more than the efforts of the single individual; by institutional, regional, national and international recognition of the individual as being among the most distinguished scholars in his/her field; and by continued invited presentations at the university, regional, state, national and international levels.

Service contributions include fostering the growth and success of students, colleagues, academic institutions and professional organizations as demonstrated by serving as catalyst and focal point in enhancing the intellectual climate; by continued service to the institution, community, state and nation through committees, consultanships, editorial and review boards.

Evidence of outstanding performance is not limited to the areas and activities listed. The rank of University Distinguished Professor is honorary and confers no additional privileges, responsibilities nor remuneration.
