A professional society dedicated to fostering and promoting research, education, and communication in the scientific understanding of seeds.

Revised July 2005

international society for seed science

The International Society for Seed Science is a professional organisation of seed scientists committed to fostering and promoting research, education and communication in the scientific understanding of seeds by:

- Publication of scientific research on seed biology in Seed Science Research, the official journal of the ISSS.
- Co-ordination and organisation of conferences, workshops and more specialised meetings related to seed science.
- Publication of proceedings of ISSS conferences and other meetings.
- Publication of a newsletter.
- Support for educational activities in seed biology, including courses, slide exchanges, web sites, etc.
- Establishment of prizes and honours for meritorious work in seed biology.
- Networking of members through e-mail groups such as SEED-BIOLOGY-L@cornell.edu.
- Posting of job listings.
- Involvement in political and public relations activities affecting seed research and utilisation.

membership benefits

Members of the ISSS are eligible for substantial discounts on subscriptions to Seed Science Research, the official journal of the ISSS, and on purchases of books related to seed biology from the publisher (CABI). Information on these benefits are available from CABI at www.cabi.org or from the ISSS website.

The Ninth International Workshop on Seeds will be held in Olsztyn, Poland in 2008. The registration fee for this meeting is reduced for ISSS members. Watch the ISSS website for further details on registration for this meeting.

Contact any of the officers or regional representatives for more information about the ISSS, or consult the ISSS website.
