Grandparents Responsible for their Grandchildren

Introduction
The U.S. Census Bureau, American Community Survey asks about grandparents raising grandchildren. Data collected include whether a grandchild lives with a grandparent in the household, if the grandparent has responsibility for the basic needs of the grandchild, and the duration of that responsibility. This Facts on KIDS will focus on these areas.

Characteristics of Grandparent Caregivers
At a time when older adults look forward to enjoying visits from their grown children and grandchildren, an increasing number have become daily caregivers for their grandchildren. That number has gone from 3 percent in 1970 to 7 percent in 2010. Grandparents living with grandchildren usually comprise two types of households, which indicate family circumstances.

- Three-generation household includes the grandparents, adult children and grandchildren. This household type could be an answer to divorce, illness, or willingness to lend a hand.
- Skipped generation households consist of grandparents and grandchildren only. This living arrangement may result from the incarceration or death of the child’s parents, child abuse/neglect, or substance abuse. Child protection agencies may have contacted the grandparents or they may have taken in their grandchild instead of the child being placed in foster care.

According to U.S. Census Bureau 2012 American Community Survey estimates, in 2012 there were 7 million grandparents in the United States living with their grandchildren (under age 18). Of those, 2.7 million (39 percent) were responsible for caring for their grandchildren.

Of the 2.7 million grandparents responsible for their grandchildren:
- 63 percent were female,
- 60 percent were in the labor force,
- 22 percent had income below the poverty level.

The map shows the percentage, by state, of grandparents living with own grandchildren under age 18 in households. A closer look at the 39 percent of grandparents responsible for grandchildren (see chart below) shows 13 percent are the householder or no parent is present. The remainder, 26 percent, are responsible for grandchildren, but are neither the householder nor spouse, although the householder or parent may be present.
Facts on Kids in South Dakota

Duration of caregiving
The arrangement for the large majority of grandparents in South Dakota who provide day-to-day care for their grandchildren, does not appear to be short term. The chart shows the percentage of time grandparents have been caring for their grandchildren in South Dakota, bordering states, and the United States.

Nationally, 39 percent of grandparents have been responsible for their grandchildren for five or more years. North Dakota (47 percent) has the greatest percentage of grandparents responsible for their grandchildren for five or more years. Conversely, Nebraska has the smallest percentage at 32 percent. South Dakota and Minnesota each have 33 percent.

South Dakota and Border States
The chart below shows the percentage by age of grandparents responsible for their grandchildren. Minnesota (68 percent) shows the highest percent of grandparents age 30-59 responsible for their own grandchildren under age 18, followed by South Dakota and Nebraska at 66 percent. Wyoming (49 percent) shows the lowest percent.

For grandparents age 60 and older, Wyoming (51 percent) shows the highest percent, followed by North Dakota (43 percent). Wyoming is the only state where grandparents older than 60, who are responsible for their grandchildren under age 18, is greater than grandparents age 30-59 — 51 percent and 49 percent, respectively.

Living Arrangements in South Dakota
The county map on the next page shows the percentage of grandparents responsible for raising their grandchildren. The South Dakota counties in which grandparent caregiver arrangements do not exist are rare. Ten counties in South Dakota have no grandparents responsible for their own grandchildren under age 18.

There are 29 counties where half or more of grandparents are responsible for their grandchildren under age 18.

Definitions - Household Type and Relationship

Relationship to the householder, is asked of all people in housing units. The question on relationship is essential for classifying the population information on families and other groups. Household – A household includes all the people who occupy a housing unit. (People not living in households are classified as living in group quarters.) A housing unit is a house, an apartment, a mobile home, a group of rooms, or a single room that is occupied (or if vacant, is intended for occupancy) as separate living quarters. Relationship to Householder

- Householder – One person in each household is designated as the householder. In most cases, this is the person or one of the people in whose name the home is owned, being bought, or rented and who is listed on line one of the survey questionnaire. Households are classified by type according to the sex of the householder and the presence of relatives. Two types of householders are distinguished: a family householder and a non-family householder. A family householder is a household living with one or more individuals related to him or her by birth, marriage, or adoption. The householder and all people in the household related to him or her are family members. A nonfamily householder is a household living alone or with non-relatives only. Spouse – Includes a person married to and living with a householder who is of the opposite sex of the householder. The category “husband or wife” includes people in formal marriages, as well as people in common-law marriages. Grandchild – The grandson or granddaughter of the householder.

Background on grandparents responsible for grandchildren

Grandparents as Caregivers-Data are collected on whether a grandchild lives with a grandparent in the household, whether the grandparent has responsibility for the basic needs of the grandchild, and the duration of that responsibility. Existence of a Grandparent Living with a Grandchild in the Household—This was determined by a “Yes” answer to the question, “Does this person have any of his/her own grandchildren under the age of 18 living in this house or apartment?” This question was asked of people 15 years of age and over. Because of the low numbers of persons under 30 years old living with their grandchildren, data were only tabulated for people 30 and over. Responsibility for Basic Needs—This question determines if the grandparent is financially responsible for food, shelter, clothing, day care, etc., for any or all grandchildren living in the household. In selected tabulations, grandparent responsibility is further classified by presence of parent (of the grandchild).

Duration of Responsibility—The answer refers to the grandchild whom the grandparent has been responsible for the longest period of time. Duration categories ranged from less than 6 months to 5 or more years. Question/Concept History—This set of questions was added to the American Community Survey in 1999 to comply with legislation passed in the 104th Congress requiring that the decennial census program obtain information about grandparents who have primary responsibility for the care of their grandchildren. The response categories for length of time caring for grandchildren were modified slightly between the 1999 and 2000 American Community Survey questionnaires to match the 2000 decennial census questionnaire. The question has remained unchanged since then.
