3+3 Program Description & Requirements

The 3+3 Program allows qualified University of South Dakota students who complete three years (minimum 90 credits) of their undergraduate degree, to apply and be admitted to the School of Law, and use the first year of law school courses toward the completion of the remaining undergraduate credits. Students pursuing this program must complete all major requirements and general education requirements. It is recommended that students take the LSAT by December of the final undergraduate year and obtain an LSAT score of at least a 152, as law school admissions and scholarship processes begin the following January. Test scores from later LSAT dates will be accepted as the admissions process allows. Students must also maintain an undergraduate GPA of at least 3.25 and submit all other required letters and application materials via the Credential Assembly Service at www.LSAC.org no later than January 1 of the year in which the student desires to enroll in the law school.

Why 3+3
