

Center for Disabilities Social Media Policy

Center for Disabilities rights and responsibilities

Our social media pages will always promote equality and person-first language. Center for Disabilities acknowledges that not all links, news articles, etc. by third-party sources follow the person-first language, but we do not endorse the practice. Please keep this in mind while reading third-party authored articles, if posted to the pages. We work to exchange important and critical information.

Center for Disabilities respects all intellectual property. We will link the source or attribute information on our social media pages to give credit to the original author or source.

The page is a moderated forum. Center for Disabilities reserves the right, with or without notice, to delete comments that contain vulgar language, personal attacks of any kind, or offensive comments of any kind. Center for Disabilities reserves the right, with or without notice, to delete comments that are spam, or inappropriate photographs or links to other sites; that are off topic; that advocate illegal activity; that promote particular services, products, or ideological or political issues or organizations; or infringe on copyrights or trademarks. In addition, the Center for Disabilities reserves the right, with or without notice, to block anyone who posts such comments.

User rights and responsibilities

Please feel free to post comments, links, videos, and photos; however, remember that information posted on the page is available for a number of people to see and comments are subject to all federal and state laws, including those related to libel, slander, antitrust, trademark, copyright, patent and unfair competition. Center for Disabilities or our affiliates are not responsible for negative results from your posts.

Comments posted on the Center for Disabilities pages are the personal opinions of the original authors and do not represent the official opinion of Center for Disabilities, its staff, faculty, advisory committee, the University of South Dakota, or associate organizations. Center for Disabilities accepts no responsibility for the content posted by others on the page.
