Utah Law
U Baltimore Law
American U WCL
NYU Law is home to many centers and institutes, specializing in various areas of law.[35]

- The Brennan Center for Justice is a progressive, non-partisan public policy and law institute that focuses on issues involving democracy and justice. The Center is directed by Adrienne O. Ceccarini, Jeremy S. Stein, and Michele Dunne.[36]

- The Center for Law, Economics and Organization promotes interdisciplinary research and teaching in law and economics. It is directed by Steven Shavell and Geoffrey Miller.[37]

- The Center on Law and Security is an independent, non-partisan, global center of expertise designed to promote an informed understanding of the post-9/11 environment. Towards that end, the Center brings together policymakers, practitioners, scholars, journalists and other experts to address issues and gaps in policy discourse and to provide concrete policy recommendations. Its fellows include: Peter Bergen, Sidney Blumenthal, Carol Dysinger, Barton Gellman, Bernard Haykel, Thomas Hegghammer, Brian Palmer, Michael Sheehan, Alexandra Starr, Robert Windrow, and Paul Cruickshank, Amos Elon, Baltasar Garzón, Tara McKelvey, Dana Priest, and Nir Rosen.[38][39] Through its many activities, international awareness of the legal dimension of security issues, including the Terrorist Trial Report Card, a comprehensive study on even the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.[40]

- The Center on the Administration of Criminal Law is a think-tank dedicated to the promotion of good government and prosecution practice issues in criminal law or having implications for the administration criminal law. In particular, the Center focuses on the exercise of power and accomplishes its mission in three areas: academia, litigation, and participating in public policy and media debates.[41] The Center's academic and research component publishes scholarship, and organizes and hosts conferences and symposia. The Center's litigation component uses the Center's research on cases having implications for the administration of criminal law, particularly in cases in which the exercise of power and discretion by prosecutors is involved. The Center's public policy and media component seeks to improve public dialogue on criminal justice matters in various ways, including testifying before legislative bodies and media interviews.[42]

- The Furman Center for Real Estate and Urban Policy is a joint venture between the law school and NYU's Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service. It is a center devoted to the public policy aspects of land use, real estate development and housing.[43]

- The Hauser Global Law School Program, launched in 1994, has moved NYU School of Law beyond the traditional study of comparative and transactional issues and the development of new laws to train 21st century lawyers. Founder and Director is Peter M. Hauser.[44]
NYU Law Centers and Institutes

- The Hauser Global Law School Program, launched in 1994, has moved NYU School of Law beyond the traditional study of comparative and international law to systematic examination of transnational issues and the development of new ways to train 21st-century lawyers. The Program incorporates non-U.S. and transnational legal perspectives into the Law School’s curriculum, promotes scholarship on comparative and global law, and brings together faculty, scholars, and students from around the world.\(^{[44]}\)

- Centers and institutes[edit]

- NYU Law is home to many centers and institutes, specializing in various areas of law.\(^{[35]}\)

- The Brennan Center for Justice is a progressive, non-partisan public policy and law institute that focuses on issues involving democracy and justice.\(^{[36]}\)

- The Center for Law, Economics and Organization promotes interdisciplinary research and teaching in law and economics. It is directed by Jennifer Arlen, Oren Bar-Gill, John Ferejohn, Mark Geistfeld, Lewis Kornhauser, and Geoffrey Miller.\(^{[37]}\)

- The Center on Law and Security is an independent, non-partisan, global center of expertise designed to promote an informed understanding of the major legal and security issues that define the post-9/11 environment. Towards that end, the Center brings together policymakers, practitioners, scholars, journalists and other experts who might not otherwise meet to address major issues and gaps in policy discourse and to provide concrete policy recommendations. Its fellows include: Peter Bergen, Sidney Blumenthal, Peter Clarke, Roger Cressey, Joshua Dratel, Carol Dysinger, Barton Gellman, Bernard Haykel, Thomas Hegghammer, Brian Palmer, Michael Sheehan, Alexandra Starr, Robert Windrem, and Lawrence Wright.\(^{[38]}\) Its former fellows included: Paul Cruickshank, Amos Elon, Baltasar Garzón, Tara McKelvey, Dana Priest, and Nir Rosen.\(^{[39]}\) Through its many activities, the Center generates local, national, and international awareness of the legal dimension of security issues, including the Terrorist Trial Report Card, a comprehensive study on every terrorism prosecution in the United States since the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.\(^{[40]}\)

- The Center on the Administration of Criminal Law is a think-tank dedicated to the promotion of good government and prosecution practices in criminal matters. The Center analyzes important issues in criminal law or having implications for the administration criminal law. In particular, the Center focuses on the exercise of power and discretion by prosecutors. The Center accomplishes its mission in three areas: academia, litigation, and participating in public policy and media debates.\(^{[41]}\) The Center's academic component gathers empirical research, publishes scholarship, and organizes and hosts conferences and symposia. The Center's litigation component uses the Center's research, experience, and expertise to litigate criminal cases or cases having implications for the administration of criminal law, particularly in cases in which the exercise of power and discretion by prosecutors raises substantive legal issues. The Center's public policy and media component seeks to improve public dialogue on criminal justice matters in various ways, including testifying before public officials and the publishing of op-ed pieces.\(^{[42]}\)

- The Furman Center for Real Estate and Urban Policy is a joint venture between the law school and NYU's Robert F. Wagner Graduate School of Public Service. It is an academic research center devoted to the public policy aspects of land use, real estate development and housing.\(^{[43]}\)
NYU Law Centers and Institutes (cont.)

- The Institute for Executive Education offers focused training for professionals and integrates key elements of law, business, and public policy into its programming. Led by Faculty Director Gerald Rosenfeld and Executive Director Erin O’Brien, the institute provides open enrollment classes for individuals and custom programs for organizations.

- The Institute for International Law and Justice integrates the law school’s scholarly excellence in international law into the policy activities of the United Nations, non-governmental organizations, law firms, and industry.

- The Institute for Law & Society is a joint venture between the law school and the NYU Graduate School of Arts and Science. It serves as an intellectual center for faculty, graduate students, and law students interested in studying law and legal institutions from an interdisciplinary social science perspective. It offers an opportunity to earn a J.D.-Ph.D or J.D.-M.A. dual degree in law and society.

- The Institute for Policy Integrity is headed by Richard Revesz and Michael Livermore. It advocates for sound cost-benefit analysis at the state, national, and global levels.

- The Pollack Center for Law and Business is a joint venture between the law school and the New York University Stern School of Business. The Center is designed to enrich the professional education of students of law and business and to facilitate joint teaching to involve leaders in banking, business, and law in the intellectual life of the University through sponsorship of meetings, conferences and dinners. The Pollack Center also offers a program for students to earn the Advanced Professional Certificate in Law and Business. The director is William T. Allen, a professor at the law school and former Chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery.

- The Straus Institute for the Advanced Study of Law & Justice brings in as Fellows each year approximately 14 leading scholars from different disciplines and cultures. Each year the Straus Institute defines an annual theme that serves as the overarching subject around which the annual fora, colloquia and conference are set. The faculty director is Joseph H. H. Weiler.

- The Tikvah Center for Law & Jewish Civilization is headed by Moshe Halbertal and Joseph H. H. Weiler. The foundational premise of the Center is 1) that the study of Jewish law can profit immensely from insights gained from general jurisprudence; and 2) that Jewish law and Jewish civilization can provide illuminating perspectives both on the general study of law as a per se academic discipline, and on the reflection of law as a central social institution refracting the most important issues in our society.

- The U.S.-Asia Law Institute serves as a resource and partner to various Asian countries as they reform and further develop their legal systems and institutions. It also works to improve the understanding of Asian legal systems by lawyers, academics, policy makers and the public. The faculty director is Jerome A. Cohen.

- The Marron Institute is an interdisciplinary and international effort to advance new research and teaching on cities and the urban environment with a focus on enabling cities globally to become more livable, sustainable, and equitable. The Marron Institute seeks to foster collaboration among faculty and researchers university-wide, bringing together the social sciences, humanities and professional schools on new research. The Institute also aims to create a vibrant learning community for scholars and students who lead and study urban research.
The University of South Dakota School of Law (also known as South Dakota Law or USD Law) in Vermillion, South Dakota, United States, is a professional school of the University of South Dakota and the only law school in the state of South Dakota. It is located on the USD campus in Vermillion in the southeastern part of the state, near the Iowa and Nebraska borders. Established in 1901, the law school is home to approximately 195 students and has more than 3,000 alumni. It currently has the third smallest student population among the American Bar Association accredited law schools.[2]
UF Video

- Email
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vermillion</th>
<th>Sioux Falls</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tradition/Less Political Conflict</td>
<td>Externship Opportunities</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interaction among all campus participants</td>
<td>More revenue opportunities (non-JD programs)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cost to uproot a school (New Building)</td>
<td>Quality of legal profession (adjunct faculty)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Money goes further</td>
<td>Market Entrance Threat</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nationwide trend/ unrelated to location</td>
<td>50 hour pro bono (ABA requirement)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Never done before</td>
<td>Greater applicant pool</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Professor/student collaboration with law school</td>
<td>20% staff/25% students from Sioux Falls</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Joint programs 10% students</td>
<td>Easier to attract faculty</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Time to fix problem</td>
<td>Donor contribution</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Hybrid 3L

Nationwide trend unrelated to location but related to lack of scholarships & modernization of programs

- Modularity
- Experiential learning for credit
- No negative media attention
- Addition of value-added adjunct professors
- Extension of network with practicing professionals

- Less political conflict
- Interaction among campus participants
- Cost to uproot a school
- Money goes further
- Joint Programs
- DONOR OPPORTUNITIES

- More Revenue opportunities (non-JD programs)
- 50 Hour Pro Bono Requirement
- 25% Students from Sioux Falls
- TIME TO FIX IS NOW